Ms. Schulz:

Please accept this email as a written communication attempting to resolve a discovery dispute. As you know, I tried calling you on Friday, and followed up with an email. As I noted in that email, I tried calling you again, today, at 1:30 PM to, again, attempt to resolve the discovery dispute. You in no manner let me know whether or not you'd be available.

In the event that you did not take my call due to the severe weather, despite knowing about it coming for some time and not telling me that you were unavailable as I requested, I will attempt a final phone call tomorrow between 9 and 10 am.

Again the matters I wish to speak about are outlined in my letter to you of January 2, 2014.

Regards,

Jonathan LA Phillips

Ms. Schulz:

Please take notice that I will note your availability to discuss our discovery dispute. You are currently sending out discovery, indicating that we could have attempted to resolve our dispute as to your client's woefully inadequate responses.
